Jacobson (hearing and speech sciences, Vanderbilt U.) and Shepard (Mayo Clinic-Rochester) began this project upon realizing that previous publications on the topic were in need of updating with the newest information on the assessment and management of vertiginous, dizzy, and unsteady patients. The text begins with introductory materials covering the anatomy and physiology of the vestibular and eye movement systems and methods for recording eye movements; a second section includes tests that comprise the contemporary vestibular systems and balance function assessments. The final section includes nonmedical, medical, and surgical treatments of vertigo and dizziness, and advanced topics including vestibular sensory evoked potentials and the assessment of falls risk.
